A Grade 5 student in the Westmount Charter School

This is a poem from a walk beside the school in Calgary, a city where there is often over six months of snow. Before the winter comes, it seems you can never get enough of the colorful sceneries and beautiful nature.

A Walk in the Beauty of Fall

Tall multi-coloured trees tower high above me

Painting the sky with their vibrant leaves

Small patches of brown and yellow

Peak out from the veil of green, covering the grass and trees

The sound of cool wind blows through the scenery

Creating a feeling of peace and serenity

Little birds happily chirp and fly freely through the sky

Oblivious to the cars and people racing about

The variety of fall colours

Create a beautiful array of yellow, brown, and red

Yet I wonder

How much longer will this scenery last?
